"I must see his excellency," insisted a portly man behind them, his voice booming through the whole room, "He s here, and I— Oh!" he broke off on light of Popoff. "Here you are! I"—
"My dear Nova Kovitch." pe rishly interrupted the ambawador, "is it neeto bunt for me with a brass band? Couldn't you"-

"I'm sorry to interrupt you," answered Nova Kovitch, "but here's a dis-patch from the Marsovian ministry. It seemed to me important, and I brought it on."

Popoff took the slip of paper and rend aloud:

"If Mme. Sadowa's twenty millions are allowed to leave Marsovia we are a bankrupt country."

"There, Prince Danilo," continued the ambassador, turning on the young in the summer house after the party. man in melodramatic appeal; 'you see it's right up to you! Your country ap peals to you to save it! You are Marsovia's last hope. Marry the widow "I'll marry no one!" flared up Danilo

"Sonia?" exclaimed Danilo.

"Mme. Badowa - prince;" gurgled Popoff, trotting up to them, unable longer to restrain his anxiety. "I hope

"If you mean is madame to marry De Jolidon," answered Dunllo, "she is"

"But this evening," ejaculated Popoff, "in the summer bouse." "She took another woman's place," replied the prince, disregarding Sonia's warning gesture.

"Dear me," squeated Popos, his curl-osity reviving. "Who was she?"

"Excuse me, your excellency," re-marked Nish, who had entered with Nova Kovitch and had hovered aim-leasly about waiting to get in a word, but here is a fan that was picked up You told me to search the place, and : 13d. If I may say so, I"-

"Same old fan!" commented Popoli, idly opening it. Then, with a jump as his eye vaguely caught the sentence Nature had scribbled beneath De Joh-"My wife's handwriting! Then it Danilo, who had stood silent during the odd proposal, now stepped past Popoff and faced Sonia, a new light in his eyes.

"Is it true you will lose all your money if you marry again?" he asked in a voice he tried in vain to keep

"Yes," she admitted; "It is true."

"Then why shouldn't I say now what want to?"

"Wby not?" she agreed demurely.

He drew a step nearer.
"I love you, Sonia," he whispered. Steadily, happily, she met his burn-ing eyes as she answered:

"I love you, Danilo. I have always loved you.' "Tut, tut!" fretted Popoff, pushing
